BOOT LICKING AD NAUSEAM

If any reader can suggest a more expressive phrase than the above to characterize the manner in which certain Democratic papers at the North have [illegible] at the feet of the ex-slave-drivers of the South since their invasion of the National Congress [illegible] in the vocabulary [illegible] for an expression of the disgust which [illegible] every Northern soul [illegible] especially those of New England at the slimy adulation which has been lavished by such papers as the Boston Post, Portland Argus and Bangor Commercial upon [illegible] of Georgia [illegible] utterances [illegible] with no exaggeration [illegible] the official [illegible] on the floor of the House [illegible]

[illegible]

The Commercial [illegible] columns of his [illegible] Hill [illegible] speech [illegible] annihilation of Blaine [illegible] for fraternity and Union [illegible]

[illegible] of the Duke of Alva [illegible] Bartholomew [illegible] the tortures of the Spanish Inquisition [illegible]

Let [illegible] THE ATROCITIES OF ANDERSONVILLE [illegible]

[illegible]

Every white person who shall act as a commissioned or non-commissioned officer commanding negroes or mulattoes against the Confederate States, or who shall arm, organize, train or prepare negroes or mulattoes for military service, or aid them in any military enterprise against the Confederate States SHALL, IF CAPTURED SUFFER DEATH

And the same humane statesman who is now so overflowing with the Centennial milk of human kindness followed up the above with this other Congressional authorization of the massacre of prisoners of war

Every commissioned or non-commissioned officer of the enemy who shall incite slaves to rebellion, or pretend to give them freedom, under the aforementioned act of Congress and proclamation, by abducting, or enticing them to be abducted, or inducing them to abscond SHALL, IF CAPTURED, SUFFER DEATH

To apply any term but barbarian to the author of such blood-thirsty violations of all the rules of civilized warfare would be a defiance of the English language. And that is the glorified [illegible] of Blaine, the great Southern statesman who is to teach us how to govern the American Republic. That is the political deity of the Boston Post, Portland Argus and Bangor Commercial!

But they cannot even claim any sincere repentance, for only a year ago the same patriot was for war and blood if the Democracy failed to get control of the country [illegible] the very speech [illegible] quoted by the organs he asserted that [illegible]

[illegible]

But you gentlemen, who persecuted us by your infidelities until you drove us out of the Union, you, who then claimed to be the only friends of the Union which you had before denounced as a league with hell and a covenant with death, you, who follow up the war when the soldiers who fought it have made peace and gone to their homes, to you we have no concessions to make. Martyrs owe no apologies to tyrants, and while we are ready to make every sacrifice for the Union, secession, however defeated and oppressed, will confess no sin to fanaticism however bigoted and exacting

OUR VIEWS FIVE YEARS AGO

TRUE AND TIMELY WORDS

AMAZING

The Boston Advertiser [illegible] the Bangor Democrat that was pitched into the street during the war as a pestilent sheet whose proprietors were guilty of treason by their infamous support of that arch traitor. It also obtains the honor of quotation in the Democratic Post with the truthful remark that the article is "remarkable among the utterances of the Republican press." We hope the Advertiser will at least get a subscription from Wade Hampton's Southern Historical Society.

The Journal however, speaks for a constituency throughout the most intelligent sections of New England, numbering probably ten to the Advertiser's one, and it speaks their sentiments clearly and manfully. The loyal men of New England are not prepared to apologize either for conquering treason or for the mild restraint put upon the worst class of traitors. The Journal well says that Mr Blaine "has completely mastered and dumbfounded the Democratic side of the House" "and let a flood of light across a chasm" which the Democratic managers intended to keep covered until after the Presidential election. It adds that those Democrats who are so vociferously trying to make somebody believe that Mr. Blaine has injured his prospects, "had better not worry about him, so long as he serves the cause of truth, fair dealing and genuine patriotism."

[From our issue of April 1871]

IS UNIVERSAL AMNESTY PRUDENT OR JUST?

When the public mind is recoiling beneath the first shock produced by the commission of some great crime, the predominant emotions are sympathy for the sufferers and a stern desire for the infliction of punishment upon the guilty. At such a time public opinion is impatient of all delays interposing between the culprit and the fall of the sword of justice, and any who attempt to counsel moderation and mercy are likely to be denounced as indifferent to the wrongs of the victims and entitled to a share of the public odium. As the vividness of first impressions fades away and the injured parties lose their temporary command of the public notice in the rapid succession of subsequent events a gradual but positive change goes on in the popular feeling [illegible]

[illegible]

It is [illegible] grateful task [illegible] the Republic [illegible]

We make no objection to the bill lately introduced by Mr Hale which has passed the House and is now before the Senate, as we are willing to make every safe concession, although we are not impressed with the argument that we must grant these amnesties to pacify the Ku Klux Klan. Our preference would be for the suppression of disorder first and the granting of privileges afterward, believing that those who will rob and murder because they are disfranchised will use the same means to accomplish other purposes if success shall be thrust upon them. But admitting the expediency of granting the relief proposed in the bill of Mr Hale, we submit that Congress should go no farther in this work of absolution, unless the popular demand shall be actually irresistible. The classes excepted under this bill have no claim to our generosity, and if treason is to be regarded as a crime their penalties certainly should not be removed. Members of the Congress of the United States, who with an oath of fidelity recorded, insultingly left their places to conspire against their country, officers of the U S Army and Navy, who deserted the flag under which they were reared, to fight against the nation which fostered them, and men who signed the ordinances of secession by which States were forced into a rebellion that deluged the country with blood, certainly should never again be permitted to walk the Halls of Congress, to fill the offices they once betrayed, or aspire to participate in governing the loyal masses.

If the people of the South were disposed to accept the issues of the war, to ignore the false doctrines of the past and to labor for the restoration of harmonious nationality, even then the prompt removal of all evidences of their error would be a severe test to their acknowledgment of defeat, and to grant a general amnesty now, when that section is reviving the outrages of the war and breathing, through its speakers and press the most bitter hostility to the national power, would be offering a premium for treason and a reward for outrage and assassination. There may be something sublime in that generosity which would welcome Jefferson Davis back to the forfeited honors of citizenship, but leniency in his case has already been extravagant in permitting him to walk unfettered and defiant in the land upon which he brought so much misery, and the possibility of his restoration to a seat in the national councils where his followers of the lost cause would gladly see him, should be enough to make a loyal citizen shudder with disgust.

We do not believe the country is prepared for such an enormity and however singular we may seem in this era of political prodigality we hold that the nation should be just before it is generous, that respect for the loyal dead, justice to the living and a prudent regard for the future demand that at least the arch-conspirators of the rebellion, the men who trafficked their honor with treason and whose example and precept led whole communities into the yawning gulf of civil war, shall never be restored to a position whence they may spit upon American patriotism in the presence of the world.

WHERE EX-SPEAKER BLAINE SPENT HIS NEW YEARS SEASON

A correspondent of the New York Tribune writing from Carlisle Penn Jan [illegible] says

Ex Speaker Blaine has been spending the New Year's season with his relatives in Carlisle, a town with which his family was identified from its foundation 150 years ago. The town was originally settled exclusively by Scotch and Scotch Irish Presbyterians and Mr. Blaine's great great grandfather was among the earliest [illegible]

Pranks of a Disordered Liver.

A disordered liver plays sad pranks with the other excretive organs the bowels the kidneys and the blood and inflicts an infinite variety of unpleasant symptoms upon its unfortunate possessor among which may be mentioned yellowness of the skin and whites of the eyes, furred tongue, nausea, headache, vertigo, pain in the side and stomach drowsiness by day and unrest by night, difficult evacuation and even irritation of the bladder and urethra. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters discipline the rebellious organ, and obviate billous manifestations more rapidly and certainly than anything else and are far more agreeable and infinitely wholesomer than the violent evacuants with which the billous often persecute their unfortunate bowels and stomachs under the mistaken impression that they are regulating their livers

DOMESTIC NEWS.

FORTY-FOURTH CONGRESS—First Session.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.

Senate.

Mr. Morton gave notice that he would ask the Senate on Wednesday to consider the resolutions on the Mississippi election.

Mr. Gordon of Ga., presented the petition of E. L. Beauregard for the removal of his political disabilities. Referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Sherman from the Financial Committee, reported with amendments the Senate bill to amend the act granting a charter to the Freedmen's Savings and Trust Co., and gave notice that he would call it up for consideration to-morrow. Placed on the calendar.

A long discussion on the amendment of the 22d joint rule of the two branches of Congress occupied the time of the Senate until 3:20 when the body went into executive session and at 4 P. M., adjourned.

House.

Bills were introduced and referred as follows: To repeal stamp duties on medicines; for the improvement of Vergennes Basin and Otter Creek, Vt.; to prevent traffic in spirituous or intoxicating liquors in the centennial buildings or grounds during the exhibition.

By Mr. Banks of Massachusetts, for the removal of all political disabilities.

By Starkweather of Conn., prescribing a form of oath for members of Congress. Among other bills referred was one proposing the following amendment to the Constitution.

Section 1—No State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, and no minister or preacher of the gospel, or of any religious creed, or denomination shall hold any office of trust or emolument under the United States or under any State nor shall any religious test be required as a qualification for any office or public trust in any State or under the United States.

Section 2—No money received by taxation in any State for the support of the public schools, or derived from any public fund therefor, nor any public lands devoted thereto shall ever be under the control of any religious sect, nor shall any money so raised, nor lands so devoted be divided between religious sects or denominations, nor shall any minister or preacher of the gospel of any religious creed or denomination hold any office in connection with the public schools in any State, nor be eligible to any position of trust or emolument in connection with any institution, public or private, in any State under the United States which shall be supported in whole or in part from any public fund.

Mr. O'Brien said he would offer it as an amendment to Mr. Blaine's proposition.

Mr. White of Ky., moved to suspend the rules and bring the House to a vote on the amnesty bill introduced by him and from the benefits of which Jefferson Davis is excluded, and also to vote on the amendment striking out that section. The motion to suspend the rules was lost yeas 165 nays 110.

A large number of Democrats voted with the Republicans in favor of the motion but the most prominent of them voted against it.

Mr. Holman made a motion to suspend the rules and adopt a resolution declaring it unwise and inexpedient at this time that a specific and arbitrary period should be prescribed by law at which legal tender notes of the United States should be paid in coin by the Secretary of the Treasury, and that therefore the act entitled an act to provide for resumption of specie payment approved Jan. 14, 1875, ought to be repealed and instructing the committee on banking and currency at as early a period as practicable to report a bill for that purpose. The rules were not suspended. Yeas 112 nays 175. Following is the list of those voting nay.

Nays—Adams, Bagley, Cal.; Bagley, Baker, Ind.; Baker, N. NEW YORK, Jan. 17. A New Orleans special has the following: Eustis and Pinchback have left for Washington and will arrive there Tuesday. The conservatives are offering bets that if neither is seated during the next thirty days Pinchback will resign. A petition signed by a number of Republican Senators has been sent to Washington asking Billings' confirmation. A meeting of the Bar of the city adopted resolutions setting forth that his confirmation will be regarded as calculated to bring the administration of justice into disrepute and fraught with the greater danger to the administration of justice in the District Court, and that opposition to the appointment is based on a want of confidence by the Bar, and the people of the State in Mr. Billings' personal character and on his professional connection with the Bankrupt Court. His legal talent is not questioned.

Military Movements.

The company of U. S. cavalry has been withdrawn from Colfax and sent to Mississippi for the alleged purpose of protection of Revenue agents. POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

The Chicago Tribune says it is due to the four Republicans—Messrs. Blaine, Bristow, Morton and Washburne—who have been mentioned in connection with the next Presidency, to say that no one of them has manifested a disposition to crowd himself forward before the other three, or to engage in any unseemly scuffle for the office, as has happened in other Presidential campaigns. The prospects, therefore, are favorable for the selection of the best man.

A writer in the Richmond (Va.) Dispatch is authority for the story that Hon. A. H. H. Stuart, of Confederate fame, was in March, 1864, summoned to Richmond by Judah P. Benjamin, in order that he might confer with President Davis; that Davis told him the Confederate Congress had voted a secret service fund of $3,000,000, gold, to be used in creating a peace sentiment at the North; that he (Stuart) refused to take it in trust, and that the Greeley correspondence and Mr. Lincoln's "To whom it may concern" was the result of the mission afterward appointed.

The Democrats in Congress—and the ex-Confederates are a majority of the Democrats in the House—have made the possible elevation of Jeff. Davis to the presidency a party issue. They have rejected the old policy of restoring political rights to whoever would ask for them, and now insist that Davis, who is exceptionally obnoxious to the American people, is no exception, and, without requiring him to ask for restoration, propose to grant to him, as to a national benefactor, the privileges which he infamously forfeited, and which he holds in too great contempt to ask to have restored.—Chicago Tribune.

Mr. Blaine is not responsible because Ben Hill chose to fly off the handle. If a man cannot venture to commune with some severity on Jeff. Davis in the Congress of the United States it becomes pertinent to inquire what the war was all about and how it ended.—Springfield Union.

After L. Quintus Curtius Lamar of Mississippi had been nominated for Senator by the Democratic caucus, the other day, he returned thanks for the nomination to an office "adorned by the statesmanship of a Brown and a Davis." The Davis to whose genius and statesmanship he thus refers, is Mr. J. Davis of Andersonville.

A GOOD SUGGESTION. We notice that on motion of Mr. Hamilton of Dexter, the Committee on Agriculture of our Maine Legislature have been instructed to inquire into the expediency of passing a law requiring the destruction of thistles and weeds in the public highways and on the location of railroads. This is an important proposition, and it is to be hoped that it will be carried into practical operation. It is utterly useless for a farmer to try to keep his fields free from weeds when the sides of the roads are filled with them. The seeds of the thistle and some other weeds will float in the air to a considerable distance, and the man who wishes to keep his fields clean of weeds has an unending task before him. Would it not be well to enact a law to require each man to keep down the thistles and weeds on his own road-side and elsewhere on his own land.—[Lewiston Journal.

LOCAL MATTERS.

There were three burials at Mt. Hope cemetery last week.

See the notice in another column of a social hop for to-morrow evening.

The specifications and plans for the improvements to be made in the post office, arrived from Washington yesterday, and work will begin very soon.

The Columbia-st. Baptist church is holding meetings at its vestry every evening, and Wednesday afternoon. Men and women of all denominations will receive a hearty welcome at these meetings.

The Literary Society have elected the following officers for the next month: C. H. Dunton, President; A. Hunt and I. W. Allen, Vice-Presidents; G. B. Goodale, Secretary and Treasurer; J. Patterson, Jr., L. W. Adams and I. W. Allen, Executive Committee.

One hundred and forty young men presented themselves yesterday for admission to the Winter School for boys. This number makes it necessary to open a second school of this grade. In the absence of a teacher Mr. Henry M. Lord has consented to open and organize the school.

A horse attached to a truck team loaded with old furniture, started at a furious rate yesterday afternoon, from West Market Square and ran into Pickering Square. For a time the situation looked serious, but no damage was done save to the furniture which was scattered in all directions.

KATAHDIN IRON WORKS. Two hundred and twenty men are now at work at the Katahdin Iron Works, cutting wood, etc. One hundred and twenty horses are also in use, hauling wood and iron. Last week over 500 cords of wood were cut and delivered from distances of one to three miles from the furnace, and seventy tons of iron were made and shipped. The No. 1, extra iron, for foundry purposes, is in good demand, with orders ahead for 300 tons, but for other grades there is little demand at present.

THE MAINE POULTRY ASSOCIATION will hold its third annual exhibition at City Hall, Portland, commencing Thursday and lasting one week. The list of entries are very full and comprise a much larger and finer variety of specimens than were ever exhibited in that city. The first exhibition consisted of some 160 entries the second of 890, while the present and third will consist of 1000 entries. There will be exhibited at this time some of the best stock in the country, some of the pairs of pigeons costing their owners as high as $300 per pair. The Main Hall will be devoted mostly to poultry, Reception Hall to pigeons, the room above to swan and minor pets.

SUICIDE BY HANGING.

A Monomaniac on Suicide Hangs Himself—Condition of his Mind—Affected by Constant use of Morphine—Previous Unsuccessful Attempt.

The community were very much shocked yesterday upon hearing of the suicide of P. M. Stevens, of Dole's Court. He was well known for many years as a shoemaker. Owing to a severe and constant pain, he began to use morphine to relieve him. The use of this narcotic was commenced seven years ago, and it finally became indispensable to him. His mind was undoubtedly affected by it until he became a monomaniac on the subject of suicide. He was obliged to give up working at his trade about two years ago on account of his feeble health. Since that time Mrs. Stevens who has been in a frail condition, and her husband have kept house by their united efforts.

Mr. Stevens has been in a dejected state of mind for a long time, and has frequently expressed his desire to die, and many times threatened to commit suicide.

About three weeks ago he attempted to commit suicide by taking a large dose of morphine. He was very anxious to have his wife die with him, and even proposed to her to take a dose of morphine. He said a small dose would probably kill her, but he would be obliged to take a large dose. His wife did not consent to the proposition, but he took about two ounces one evening before retiring, and woke his wife up about one o'clock telling her that he was going to die, and that he preferred to draw his last breath on the sofa in the kitchen. She immediately arose and prepared a bed on the kitchen sofa. Mr. S. then begged his wife to call no assistance or medical aid as he wanted to die, but the overdose did not kill him.

The subject, however, did not leave his mind, and he would talk about it continually, often asking his wife to suggest to him the easiest mode of suicide. He thought he might bleed to death, but did not act upon the idea. Shortly after his first attempt at self-destruction he informed his wife that if she ever found the shed door locked on the inside she must not attempt to open it, but immediately call assistance. Lately he has been deprived of the morphine, and his craving for it became intense. They were unable to purchase it from lack of funds, and the fact was realized that the use of morphine must be stopped or they would be obliged to go to the alms-house. He was too proud to go to the alms-house, and his passion for morphine was too strong for him to overcome. This short account brings us up to yesterday morning. He made an early call upon some carpenters in an adjoining building, and his wife went out a little past nine o'clock, returning shortly before eleven. When she entered the house she missed her husband, and was surprised to see his cane—which he always carried with him—in the kitchen, and also his overcoat. This led her to suppose something was wrong, and she attempted to go into the shed but found the door locked on the inside. Her strength proving insufficient to open the door, she immediately called in a Mr. Gray who forced the door open and found Mr. Stevens hanging by his neck, in a lifeless condition. He was immediately cut down and carried into the house. As his body was warm a physician was sent for, but it was not possible to revive him. He hung himself with a cloud belonging to his wife.

The unfortunate man was 67 years old, and it can be truly said he was the victim of morphine and pride. A letter written by him before the suicide was found, in which he writes to a friend to assist his wife in the funeral services, and, at the close he expresses his thanks to his wife for her devotion and kindness, and asks her to forgive the many failings and shortcomings of his life.

Obituary.

STEPHEN B. LOVEJOY.

Our correspondent Nopeh sends us the following obituary of Mr. S. B. Lovejoy, a respected citizen of Winn: For a long time Mr. Lovejoy suffered with disease, and last Saturday he breathed his last—much to the sorrow of a large circle of friends—at the advanced age of sixty-two years and eight months. He was born in Fayette, Me., and at the age of twelve he moved to Sebec where he learned the blacksmith's trade of an older brother. In the year 1836 he removed to Lincoln where he married Miss Elizabeth Peaslee, of Jefferson, Me. Although this union was not blessed with children, yet two adopted children have been the worthy and happy recipients of more than a father's and mother's love and bounty.

Mr. Lovejoy resided in Lincoln for over thirty years, and all the time was engaged at his trade. As a citizen he was the recipient of many positions of trust and responsibility at the hands of his fellow-citizens.

In 1868, about the time of the building of the Winn tannery, he removed to Winn, where he occupied himself at his trade till within the last five years. He was, as in Lincoln, many times honored by his fellow-citizens. He has ever been a firm and ready advocate of the principles of the Republican party and a thorough exemplar of temperance. His generosity to the poor, and love for children, have always been proverbial. He always remembered the poor in his vicinity, especially on Thanksgiving occasions. The children also loved him, and will now miss his generous acts and kindly words.

The funeral service will be held at his former residence to-day, Rev. J. A. Morelen, of Lincoln, officiating. The remains will be taken to Lincoln for interment.

Mr. Lovejoy's characteristics as a straightforward, upright, honest man commended him to the respect and regard of his neighbors and fellow-citizens, and his place will be hard to fill. Universal sympathy is expressed for the bereaved relatives.

Health and long life are secured only by careful attention to the first symptoms of disease. The sore throat and slight cough are warnings that should be heeded at once; if not immediately arrested they will end in Catarrh or Consumption—perhaps death. RETURNS TO BANGOR. Dr. Carl B. Lighthill, Oculist and Aurist, owing to the great success he has had during his late professional visit, and at the earnest solicitations of many prominent citizens of Bangor and vicinity, who desire to procure his medical services, will return to Bangor on Monday, January 24th, 1876, when he can be consulted free of charge, at the Penobscot Exchange. The afflicted with deafness, Catarrh and diseases of the Eye, Ear, Throat and air-passages, are respectfully invited to call as early as convenient so as to secure the doctor's personal attention.

BANGOR, December 30, 1875.
I gladly testify that Dr. Lighthill completely cured me of deafness in my right ear, which has troubled me for the past 20 years and my left one, which also became quite deaf during the past year. I will be glad to give any information concerning the veracity of this statement to any one calling upon me. I reside on Brimmer St., Brewer, and have been a resident of this locality for 20 years. A late number of the St. John Morning News thus concludes a lengthy article eulogizing Fellows' Syrup of Hypophosphites: "Mr. Fellows is certainly entitled to high credit for his energy and enterprise in working up his valuable discovery so successfully, and the presence of such gentlemen in any community is a matter on which that community should congratulate itself."

The St. John Telegraph and Journal says: "The invention of Fellows' Hypophosphites has become one of the valuable industries of the country, unique of its kind, and a credit to the Dominion of Canada."

SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP, SEA WEED TONIC, AND MANDRAKE PILLS. These deservedly celebrated and popular medicines have effected a revolution in the healing art, and proved the fallacy of several maxims which have for many years obstructed the progress of medical science. The false supposition that "Consumption is incurable" deterred physicians from attempting to find remedies for that disease, and patients afflicted with it reconciled themselves to death without making an effort to escape from a doom which they supposed to be unavoidable. It is now proved, however, that Consumption can be cured, and that it has been cured in a very great number of cases (some of them apparently desperate ones) by Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup alone; and in other cases by the same medicine in connection with Schenck's Sea Weed Tonic and Mandrake Pills, one or both, according to the requirements of the case.

Dr. Schenck himself, who enjoyed uninterrupted good health for more than forty years, was supposed, at one time, to be at the very gate of death, his physicians having pronounced his case hopeless, and abandoned him to his fate. He was cured by the aforesaid medicines, and, since his recovery many thousands similarly affected have used Dr. Schenck's preparations with the same remarkable success.

Full directions accompany each, making it not absolutely necessary to personally see Dr. Schenck unless patients wish their lungs examined, and for this purpose he is professionally at his principal office, Corner Sixth and Arch Sts., Philadelphia, every Monday, where all letters for advice must be addressed. Schenck's medicines are sold by all druggists. eodlm jan1

A VOICE IN THE DESERT.

BY MAY HORATIO N. POWERS.

The west was gorgeous with the sunset splendor—
The gathered flowers of Light's resplendent crown;
Bloom after bloom did Paradise surrender,
As if the Gardens of the Blest came down.

The east was piled with clouds of storm and thunder—
Huge mountains seamed with bolts of hurtling fire—
Now swept by gales that tore their cliffs asunder,
And then in weird convulsions heaving higher.

O'er the sun's couch the roses still kept blowing,
And royal lilies, starred with purple eyes,
Fast banks of golden daffodils kept growing,
Soft ridge on ridge, along the glowing skies.

But down the gorges of the storm's sierras
The rain and hail in roaring cascades fell,
The lightning, playing like a chord of Furies,
Pictured the nameless scenery of Hell.

On the vast plain where I behold the vision,
On one side beauty, on the other dread—
Between the Tempest and the scene Elysian—
An antelope uprighted bowed its head.

Beside a stunted shrub, alone, unfriended,
It waited 'mid the awful desert place,
Half at home and tenderly defended,
Love's radiance and the storm-glare on its face.

I saw the dying of the western splendors,
I saw the darkness of the tempest fall,
And heard a mighty voice, in accents tender,
Out of the brooding Terror to me call:

"O wanderer o'er Life's deserts and its mountains,
In storm and sunshine, with uncertain feet,
Pining for joy of the immortal fountains,
And clinging still to all of earth that's sweet,

"The heart is in the thunder and the roses,
One hand the Spoiler and the gale distills,
In whom the INFINITE reposes,
[illegible] place in Heaven's grand order meetly fills.

"Whate'er his path, howe'er sad its seeming,
The glory or the darkness overhead,
Upon it Love's unchanging smile is beaming,
And to the perfect Good his steps are led."

BOB'S BABY.

A boy sat on a trunk near the baggage room of Wakesha station, waiting for the train to come in. Not that he was expecting to go anywhere—he only wished he could—but he liked the bustle and excitement of the scene, and, what was more to the purpose, he sometimes picked up a stray penny by giving the porters a lift or standing guard over some gentleman's travelling bag, or carrying some lady's superfluous parcels.

On this particular occasion there was an unusual bustle, for it was Christmas morning, and the depot was thronged with those awaiting the arrival of friends, or who were themselves bound on a holiday excursion.

Presently the engine with its long train of cars came snorting and thundering up the track, and the crowd surged forward to the front of the platform. Bob, for that was the boy's name, was about to do the same, when he was stopped by a showily-dressed woman with a child in her arms.

"Please take my baby for a moment," said she, "I've forgotten something."

"Yes, ma'am," said Bob, receiving the child and seating himself on the trunk again, while the woman dropping her travelling-bag at his feet, hurried away and was lost in the crowd.

Bob waited patiently, not doubting that she would immediately return to claim her little charge; but the minutes went by, the whistle sounded, the bell rang, and the train began to move slowly out of the depot and still she did not appear. Then Bob started up in alarm, and ran toward the departing train, and, as he did so, the distinctly saw the woman's face at a window.

"The lady—the—left her baby—take it, somebody!" he shouted and held it out to two or three gentlemen who were rushing into the cars at the last moment—is gentlemen will.

But neither of them seemed inclined to avail themselves of the offer. The train moved faster and faster, and finally moved out of sight, while Bob stood still gazing in the direction in which it had vanished, an image of surprise and dismay.

"Hello!" exclaimed the then turning his eyes from the line of blue smoke which still floated above the tree tops, to the face of the child in his arms, and in a single word he expressed volumes.

"Well, what's the meaning of this?" asked the depot master, his attention now for the first time attracted to the scene.

"Why, you see the lady asked me to hold her baby while she went to get somethin' and she was carried off without it."

"The lady? What lady?"

"Don't know. Never seen her before."

"Where did she come from?"

"Don't know. The first I see, she was standing right in front of me."

"Where was she going?"

"Don't know! Don't know nothing about her, only she asked me to hold the baby, 'cause she'd forgot somethin'. She left her bag too, there"—pointing with his foot because his hands were otherwise engaged; "and I know she went off in the cars, 'cause I see her looking out of the winder."

There was a straightforwardness about Bob's story which carried conviction with it, and none of the little circle, of which Bob was now the centre, thought of doubting its truth.

While the depot master was deliberating what to say next, a rough looking boy about Bob's age, who had left off shouting "Wakesha Chronicle," to hear what was going on, cried out:

"Oh, ain't you green! She didn't mean to come back."

"That's it, I guess," said the depot master.

"Bobby, my boy you're sold, and have got a baby on your hands," said another.

In short it was apparent that the young newsboy had expressed the sentiments of all the men present.

The next question was, how Bob should dispose of this very odd and unexpected Christmas present.

"You had better go to the town authorities and let them take the child," said the depot master.

"Yes."

"Certainly," chimed in the bystanders, and so the matter would have been settled, but the baby, who had been looking wonderingly from one to another, now nestled closely to Bob's shoulder, and began to wail piteously. It was only a natural result of finding herself left so long alone among strangers, but to tender-hearted Bob it seemed a direct appeal to his sympathy and protection.

"I should like to keep her. I should like to take her home," said he.

"Good for you," said a man who had not yet spoken—only a poor coal heaver, begrimmed and smirched from top to toe. "Good for you! You see, gentlemen, 'taint always certain 't the woman won't come back next train, so what's the hurry about sending the baby to the poorhouse—for that's what 't would come to. If the woman don't come, and we don't hear nothing after we've advertised, 'pears to me it'll be time enough to talk about the poorhouse then."

No one offered any objections to this view of the case, and the coal heaver added:

"It'll cost something to advertise, though; dunno's that ought to come on to Bob."

"Certainly not," said the depot master, taking out his pocketbook, an example which was immediately followed by others so that an amount was collected quite sufficient to defray all contingent expenses, and handed over to Bob. Then he walked out of the depot with the baby and carpet-bag, followed by his friend the coal heaver.

"Have a ride on my kear?" asked the latter.

"Don't care if I do, if it's in your way," said Bob.

"I'll make it in my way," said the good natured man. So Bob clambered in, the horse started at a slow trot, and the little cart jolted merrily away over the cobble-stones, with its novel freight.

It was not till Bob came in sight of the little one-story house which he called home that he began to ask himself whether he had not acted hastily in undertaking such a charge without consulting Mother Darby, as he called the woman with whom he lived.

For Bob was an orphan—nay, more he had neither kith nor kin that he knew of in the wide world. Ever since he could remember, he had been passed from one to another who had been willing to harbor him a little while, either from charity or the work he could do. For two or three months his home had been with Mother Darby, receiving his board and scanty clothing in consideration of his tending the cow, bringing in wood and running of errands.

"So, what will Mother Darby say?" was the question he asked himself as the cart stopped at the gate, and, bidding the kind coal-heaver good-bye he entered the house with his burden.

What she did say was:

"What under the sun have you got there?"

"She's so pretty—and the woman left her, and they talked of sending her to the poorhouse. I couldn't help it," answered Bob, rather incoherently.

"Mercy on us! What are you talking about? I can't make head nor tail of it. But give me the baby, do. She's most frozen, poor thing."

And as the woman, whose heart was much softer than her speech, sat down by the fire and began to take off the child's hood and cloak, Bob's courage revived, and he told the story from beginning to end, as we know it already.

"A pretty job you've undertaken!" said Mrs. Darby, then. "The woman never'll come back; that you may depend. She wa'n't its mother no more'n I am."

"I thought you'd let it stay till something could be done," said Bob, dejectedly.

"Of course I will. I ain't a wild Injun, to turn such a baby as this adrift by itself," said Mother Darby.

She then warmed some milk and fed the little one, and in a few minutes it was sleeping quietly on Mother Darby's old calico lounge, unconscious alike of past or future perils.

"Her folks is well off, whoever they be," said Mother Darby, examining the little blue silk hood, trimmed with swan's down, and the embroidered thibet cloak.

"The woman that gave her to me was a stunner," said Bob; by which praise he no doubt intended to express his appreciation of her fine clothes.

Bob lost no time in advertising the child, but days went on, and no answer appeared, nor did the woman return to claim her charge. The travelling-bag contained nothing that would afford the slightest clue to the child's identity except the single name "Elsie" on some of the clothing.

"Well, I'm sorry, but there's nothing for it but to send it to the poorhouse," said Mother Darby.

"That I'll never do!" said Bob.

"Heyday! I reckon there's somebody to be consulted besides you! 'Taint likely I shall undertake to raise her at my time of life, and nothing but my two hands to depend upon neither."

"But couldn't you let her stay here if I'll pay her board?" pleaded Bob.

"You?" said Mother Darby, laughing derisively. "Much as ever you can earn the salt you eat."

"Well, if you won't keep her, I s'pose I must find a place for her somewhere else, for she shall never go to the poorhouse while I can work for her."

"Mercy sakes! If you're so set about it, do let her stay and try it," said Mother Darby, whose heart secretly yearned over the child more than she cared to acknowledge. And so it was settled, though the good widow could not believe the arrangement would be more than temporary.

"I dare say as soon as we begin to get fond of the child, we shall have to send her off," said she.

But in this she was mistaken. It was true that hitherto Bob had not been overfond of work, and had given her some ground for the taunt that he hardly earned the salt he ate. But now a great change came over him. He felt that he had an object in life, was ready to undertake any honest job, to work early and late, so that he might keep Elsie with him.

And when the story got abroad, and it was seen how thoroughly in earnest he was, much sympathy was manifested for Bob and "Bob's baby," as the child came to be called, and many kind-hearted people were ready to aid him in his endeavors. So Bob succeeded, as he deserved to do, and nothing more was ever said about sending Elsie to the poorhouse.

She meanwhile, continued to grow and thrive. In fact, she quite outgrew her original wardrobe, which was carefully folded away in Mrs. Darby's best drawer, and new and coarser clothing provided for her use.

Nearly a year had passed away, and people were ceasing to speculate upon the mysterious advent of Bob's baby, when the affair was revived again by the appearance of an advertisement in a New York paper headed

"Child lost!" Then followed a description of the child, of the clothing, with a statement of dates and circumstances which seemed to identify Elsie as the lost one beyond a doubt.

The address given was Arthur Markham, Box 1229, New York city.

"Poor Bob!" This was a terrible blow to him, but he felt that he ought to do all that he could to restore Elsie to her parents, so he immediately wrote a letter in answer to the advertisement, and having dropped it in the office, returned home with a heavy heart.

"Mebbe she don't belong to them, after all," said Bob to himself, "and they've got to prove it before they take her away."

This was the one hope to which he clung but it speedily vanished, for only three days later a lady and gentleman stopped at Mother Darby's door. Bob hastened to open it, and a single glance at the lady's face told him that she was Elsie's mother.

"Is this the place?"—began the gentleman, but with a faint shriek the lady darted through the open door and caught little Elsie in her arms.

"O my darling, my darling!" sobbed she, "for neither time, nor change, nor absence could deceive the mother's heart."

If further proof was needed it was found on Elsie's clothing, which, as we have already said, Mother Darby had carefully preserved, and in the complete harmony of the evidence on both sides.

The story Mr. Markham told was this: His wife being an invalid, he had, by order of the physician, taken her to Italy to pass the winter, leaving Elsie in charge of a nurse in whom they had confidence. They kept up a constant communication with the woman until their return, when, to their dismay, they found both nurse and child were missing from the house in which she had lived when they had left the country. They could obtain no trace of her, and only recently they had received a message from the woman—though a third person, that she had left the child at some station on the line of the New York Central Railroad, but the name of the place she had forgotten or failed to notice. Her object in this transaction was, of course, to appropriate the money, which she had been liberally supplied, and rid herself of the burden of caring for the child.

To Mother Darby, Mr. Markham paid for her care of Elsie twice as much as it was worth, which she received with a grateful courtesy, but to Bob he said:

"I don't know how I can pay you."

"I don't want no pay. I did it because I loved her," answered Bob, with quivering lip.

"I shall remember you though," said he, and his wife to the back which awaited them outside the gate, but when he would have lifted Elsie in, she clung to Bob, crying:

"Bobbie go, too! Bobbie go too!"

"And why shouldn't he go too? It is cruel to seperate them," said Mrs. Markham.

Then they talked a few minutes in a low voice, and turning to Bob, Mr. Markham said: "How would you like to go to New York with us?"

"To New York, and be with Elsie!" cried Bob, his brain hardly able to take in two ideas of such magnitude at once.

"Yes, to be with Elsie always. Do you think you could be happy with us?"

"Happy? Oh!" was all Bob could answer. Another Christmas morning dawned, and again Bob rode from the station with Elsie in his arms, not, however, in the poor coal heaver's cart, but in Mr. Markham's comfortable carriage.

Presently the carriage stopped, not at Mother Darby's little one-story house in the outskirts of Wakesha, but at a pleasant, commodious dwelling in New York city; Mr. and Mrs. Markham alighted, and went up the granite steps followed by Bob, leading Elsie by the hand.

The door opened, and warmth, and light, and beauty greeted them which ever way they turned. Such was Bob's entrance into his new home. Can we do better than take our leave of him there by wishing him a merry Christmas?

In politics the papers will continue to advocate and uphold the principles of the Republican party, while claiming to be independent, in the highest and best sense of the words. Fearless and outspoken in the treatment of all public questions and firmly maintaining what they believe to be right, they will avoid intolerance and make their appeals to the understanding rather than to prejudice. The year about to open will be fruitful of unusually important political events bearing upon the future of our country, and in precedented interest will be excited in the

OF THE

Centennial Year.

The celebrations of the Hundredth Anniversary of our National Independence will also be conducted on a magnificent scale and the public will wish to be kept fully informed of the progress of these great events. It will be our aim to afford our readers the earliest and most reliable information and to favor only such measures and policy as will best promote the welfare of all the people.

HOME INTERESTS

as affected by the development of the resources of Maine, will receive special attention, and whatever is calculated to stimulate or benefit

Agriculture and Manufactures in this State will be heartily encouraged. We rigidly exclude from our columns everything of an immoral tendency, avoid sensational matter and seek to make a thoroughly reliable paper which will be sure of A Welcome in Every Family Circle.

To advertisers our columns open one of the best fields in New England, our circulation being the largest of any paper in this section, among the best classes of the people, and as

THE ONLY MORNING DAILY

East of the Kennebec,

our Daily issue affords the principal medium of communication with a large and constantly increasing number of readers throughout Central and Eastern Maine.

OUR WEEKLY

is also the largest and best Weekly Newspaper in the State. Every number accompanied by a two-page supplement, making a paper of FORTY-EIGHT columns, or one half larger than any other Weekly. It is a standard publication with large and constantly increasing circulation among the most intelligent and thrifty of the population of Eastern Maine, and the small space devoted to advertising is eagerly sought by the best class of patrons.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE

LETTER CARRIERS.

All letters are delivered free by carriers when addressed to street and number. People should inform their correspondents of above and have their letters addressed accordingly.

Persons leaving their address at the General Delivery can also have their letters sent, but it is much more convenient to have the street and number on, and they will be delivered earlier than if the number is put on at the office. Carriers make two deliveries daily, the first trip supplying the extremes of their routes.

Collections are made morning and evening in season for important mails—the down town boxes fifteen and the up town boxes thirty minutes before closing mails at the office.

Holidays the Carriers' Window will be open for the delivery of letters from 8½ to 9½ A. M., and from 7½ to 8½ P. M. Sundays from 8½ to 9½ A. M.

Any irregularities in the Carriers' department should be reported to the office.

ENVELOPES.

No additional charge will be made for printing the name and request to return, across the left hand upper corner of the envelopes furnished by the Post Office Department, samples of which may be seen at the Cashier's window, when ordered in lots of not less than 500.

A request for the return of a letter to the writer, if unclaimed within thirty days, or less, written or printed, with the writer's name, post office and State, across the left end of the envelope, on the face side, will be complied with.

The public are earnestly recommended to procure stamped envelopes with printed return request, as the expense is less, and letters thus endorsed, if not delivered to the person addressed, are returned to the writer free of charge.

First class envelopes of above furnished at $[illegible] per thousand.

Stamps cut from Stamped Envelopes cannot be used to prepay postage. The use of such Stamps is punishable by a fine of fifty dollars.

Stamped Envelopes, spoiled in directing, are redeemed at this office.

DOMESTIC POSTAGE.

All letters must be Prepaid—Letters for the Mails in the United States, three cents the half ounce or single rate. City letters, two cents half ounce or single rate.

County papers free, except to letter carrier offices. If papers coming to this office, if published in County, are subject to postage. Daily papers published in County, if delivered by carrier, one cent each, to be prepaid by stamps.

Postage to Canada—same as in the States on letters and papers, prepayment compulsory, merchandise limited to 8 oz; postage 1c cents.
